

FELLOWSHIP COMMUNITY

This community dates back to a time before 1890 when C. S. Keith donated two acres of land for the Fellowship Cumberland Presbyterian Church. This was located in the Southwest corner of the Fowler Brian farm and is still a thriving church today.

Some of the numerous families of the community were, M. N. McKenzie and children Aubrey, Edwin, Ruth, Mike, Johnie Evelyn. The Fowler Brian family and children Morgan, A.T., Bruce, Ester, Janis. The John Carroll Family, Jake, Cleveland, Zola, Estell, Zettie, Greer and Johnny. The Arthur Jones Family with children Arthur B. and Ethel B.. Alvin Haltom family ,J. D. and Wyatt. The Roy Jeffus family ,James, Marcell and Alice. The Will Jeffus family, Will T.. The Buck Efird family, Alvin, James and Roy Lynn. Marcus Clay family, James Edward, Charles and M. L.. The Floyd Scoggins family, Johnny and Dean. D. W. Fellers family and son Billie. The Bill Jones family, Ernest, Bill, Ralph. Oren Jeffus family. Virgil Jeffus family, Hugh Wayne and Ann. The Edison Jeffus family, Alva, Samuel, Jenice and Mary. The "Red" Robertson family, Glenda, Millard. The Otto Primm family, two boys and twin girls Marilyn and Carolyn. The Russell family (on Finn Switch Road), daughter Elouise. The G.A. Gordy family. The A. H. Gilder family Hulon, Clinton, Rena. The Joe Patterson family including John, Marian "Hun", and Leonard. The J. T. Stough family. The Joseph Fowler Cook family which included DeWitt Cook.

One of the distinguished citizens of this community was George W. Hays, who became Governor of Arkansas. A story related to me was that he grew up with very modest means and had to borrow a pair of trousers from one of John Carroll's boys to wear when he went courting. The Hays home was located where Henry Carroll now lives.

Many children and grandchildren of these families still reside in this community.
